About

Roy Bailey, the Director of Technology at Bow School District, is the 2024 NHCTO of the Year. This award celebrates Roy's transformative 31-year tenure in the Bow School District. Under Roy's leadership, the district's infrastructure evolved significantly, embracing the digital age with robust systems and enhanced cybersecurity measures. His proactive approach to integrating synchronous learning platforms during the pandemic was instrumental in maintaining continuous learning, proving critical to the district's resilience in challenging times. Roy's influence extends beyond the local district. His significant contributions to the Christa McAuliffe Conference and his tenure as president of the NH Society for Technology in Education (NHSTE) highlight his impactful role in shaping educational technology across New Hampshire. His legacy is not only marked by technological advancements but also by the cultivation of a future-ready, inclusive educational environment. Roy Bailey truly embodies the spirit and innovation expected of a NHCTO of the Year.
